ARMY MUSIC.

HOW AN ARMY COOK WAS CHARMED BY A REGIMENTAL BAND.

A Monster Band at a Grand Review—Kilpatrick in Charge of a Regular Virginia Breakdown—The First Sheet.

(St. Louis Republic.)
Mr. Lloyd Harris, of St. Louis, contributes the following from a rather extensive budget of war papers all-day published: Many of the veterans of the Army of the Potomac remember the splendid band of the Fourteenth Brooklyn Cavalry. Whenever they appeared in their gay uniforms and started one of their inspiring tunes the effect on all the colored servants was electrical. One day while we were encamped back of the Arlington house, a table cook had started with our coffee pot in his hand from an open fire toward the tent where Hoots and the Plunkers and I were waiting his arrival. Just at the moment the Fourteenth band struck up "Dixie" as they were passing by, and a wondrous effect, still holding the coffee-pot, completely entranced by the music, and never stopped until the tune had ended and he was half a mile from the tent. On his return he looked very foolish and ventured: "Captain, I never heard such music as dat in ole Virginia."

The same band united with several others and made a monster band at McClellan's grand review; 100 live instruments, thirty tabor and ten bass drums, all under one leader, formed the brightest feature of the grand review ever witnessed in this country.

On our way to Fredericksburg, in 1862, we had encamped for a day, and late in the afternoon our attention was attracted by the music of a band in a grove only half a mile away, who kept playing one lively air for so long a time that some of us proposed to go over and see what the fun was about. At this time Kilpatrick was lieutenant colonel of the Harris' light cavalry, afterward called the "Dixie" cavalry, and "Kilpatrick's thieves." When we reached the grove a very funny sight greeted us. The band was still playing, but nearly exhausted. Kilpatrick, elevated by standing on a barrel-head, was shouting directions to at least fifty darky men, women and children, old and young, who were dancing a breakdown in the true Virginia style, the sweet pouring of the music, and the band leader appealed to Kilpatrick in behalf of his wind-broken band, but in vain. "Kil!" shouted back. "Play till you wear the darkies out," then yelled to the darkies, "Keep it up, boys and girls, you will beat the band sure."

Aye, there stood the man who was afterward celebrated in history, Gen. Kilpatrick, the raider, prompting the most amusing dance ever witnessed. No modern minstrel troupe has ever equaled it. His officers were just as busy as he was, and one of them passed around the hat, to which the spectators responded liberally, then, just as the band blew a last and defiant blast, Kilpatrick threw the contents of his hat among the contrabands. Such a scene; down on all four, scrambling, pushing, and screaming, until the last silver pipe had been secured. Kilpatrick came down from the barrel, and in his ever genial manner shook hands with us, saying: "Gentlemen of the Sixth, I am glad to see you. You will excuse this little party, for it is my first time that we have such fun, and the same time give active employment to the contrabands."

The Iron brigade in crossing the Rappahannock river to participate in the battle of Fredericksburg were hit by a shell from the enemy and one of the regiments, the Twenty-fourth Michigan, who were to receive their first baptism under fire, were marching in front of the old Sixth veterans, color flying, the band playing "Hail Columbia, Happy Land," when, alas! the sun appeared, the fog lifted and the train guns of half a dozen rebel batteries opened their work of destruction. The band leader, who had landed in the midst of the band and scattered them right and left. Those who survived beat a hasty retreat to the sheltering bank of the river, and brave Col. Morrow kept his gallant regiment "well in hand" shouting, "Steady, men, those Wisconsin men are watching you." I do not remember of ever seeing that band in any of the hard-fought battles their regiment afterward participated in.

Only a Coward Not Not-West.
[Brig. Gen. Conly, in National Tribune.]
We had in the Twenty-third Ohio (Hayes' regiment) a quaint old character—an enlisted musician—whose name I would not mention for anything. Just before the battle of South Mountain he came to me and asked me to step aside with him a moment. I did so, and he said: "My God, Major, I thought I could help the country, and though I was past 45, and nearly to, I enlisted. Now I have found that I can't go the night. I can't march, if you should kill me! I shall be disgraced, and all the folks at home will know it. I can never hold my head up again if I try to go into this fight. Can't you do something for me? Give me something to do that ain't fighting and I'll do anything. Oh, for God's sake, major, think of something and save me from the disgrace!"

The poor fellow was half frantic in his earnestness. I thought a moment and said: "A—, do you think you could carry water for the men while they are fighting? It is going to be an awful hot day, and a canteen of fresh water will be about the greatest luxury the men could have without any more carrying water for them." "Oh, yes! Thank you, major." Well, now, in the thickest of that fight, where the regiment lost within a few minutes of the day that went into action, old A— would come to the front loaded down with canteens, delivering them, and taking up the empty ones along the line. Between bayonet charges the men were lunging the ground like a long lost brother, under such a storm of mini ball as did not seem to leave any unoccupied space in the air. Old A— would prance down the line delivering canteens to the passing men without any more sense of fear than the bravest man in the army, until his last canteen of water was gone, then he would give a yell and bolt for the rear as if the devil was after him.

Fence of the Future.
[New Orleans Times.]
The fence of the future, I last a life time, will be trees and wire. The trees set at proper distances, will serve for posts, for shade and for ornament.
